to stories told by the emissaries of the padrones, they began to suspect Palumbo, Father Bandini and the St. Raphael Society officers.

The Street-Cleaning Department should have furnished the money for that extralabor last week, but did not. Palumbo decided to pay the men out of his own pocket, and wait for the Commissioner to get ready to pay him. He announced to the men that they would be paid off this morning by the new labor bureau opened by the St. Raphael Society at 59 Spring street.

At 10 o'clock the place was crowded. As soon as the first of the 119 men received his $1.12 the trouble began. He objected, and said he was entitled to $1.50. He was backed up by many of his companions, and matters were looking decidedly ugly when Palumbo himself appeared. When the cause of the trouble was explained to him, his indignation rome to fever heat. "I knew it," he cried, "I knew at the time it was all a trick of the padrones. Commissioner Andrews is responsible for this and he must answer. It is part of the plot."

Then he dramatically addressed the crowd and by his earnestness succeeded in setting them to believe the true stars.

The action of the Central Labor Union yesterday in condemning the padrone system and deciding upon the prosecutation of a monster petition to Mayor Gilleroy asking him to have that nocke of employing men for the city departments abolished caused considerable talk in Italian quarters this morning Gutsche of the padrones themselves the Central Labor Union is generally indursed. "This movement," and franker Palumbo, "has grown to be the biggest question in Italian circles, it means not only the crushing of the padrones but the enfranchisement of the whole Italian race in this city. It is a movement which appeals to every nationality, to every class and to every degree of labor.
